Continuation of 11, does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant has amended claim 1 to include the limitation of claim 13. Applicant argues that Arescon does not disclose an auto-configuration capability for reconfiguration capability for reconfiguration or application of a piece of equipment. This argument is not persuasive because Pages 9-10 of Arescon describe the addition of equipment to the network upon deployment. Arescon states that network configuration can be set by connecting a terminal to its serial port, and states that the network configuration can be set by simply connecting a Palm-Pilot to the instrument. Because all that is required is making the physical connection to place the instrument into the network, the configuration performed by the Palm-Pilot is automatic, and is therefore an auto-configuration capability of the network.
